

Interior designers did what?

The photo below shows how Rambush interior decorators re-created a "Scandinavian" bedroom of the Viking age back in 1924. I have found reference to similar furnishings in Du Challu (see references). The friezes along the tops of the walls depict Viking ships. Perhaps this room could have been a loft, or a skemma (sleeping house). Would anyone care to check the research on this attempt, and perhaps create a set of plans for a reconstruction of this type?

Sources: Above and right: Paul B. Du Challu, The Viking Age (New York: Charles Scribner's Sons, 1889); Below: Swales, Francis "S. Galleys and Viking Ships," from Pencil Points (New York: Pencil Point Press), 1924, V.5.

